WAINWRIGHT RINKS LOSE DAWSON CUP TO EDGERTON BOYS

On Wednesday last a couple of rinks from Edmonton under the guidance of Skips Murdoch and Pawsey challenged Wainwright for the Bill Dawson trophy and Messrs. Dunsmore and Bryant skipped the local rinks for the contest.

After some very uneven scoring, the game was tied at the twelfth end, and the score board chalked up 20 all in extra end was played to break the tie, and in this play-off both sides gained a piece, and his necessitated being put on for a game. The game was won by Wainwright's rink for the two Edgerton rinks, and the score on this play-off was 3-0 while in the extra end, an assist at 2-0 was thus carried off by Wainwright's rink. The rink was composed of Messrs. Dunsmore, Bryant, Skips Murdoch, and Pawsey. The rink was composed of Messrs. Dunsmore, Bryant, Skips Murdoch, and Pawsey.

DEPUTES TALES OF HARVESTERS

In a recent issue of the Toronto Globe a statement appears from a Scotch farmer in Canada, in the form of a letter to the "Edinburgh Scotsman" taking exception to the action of the British harvesters who have returned to the Old Country with tales of hardship and suffering endured this year while in the Dominion. He emphasizes the fact that of 12,000 Britishers who came to Canada for the 1923 harvest only 500 to 1,000 had gone back and these few had made noise and trouble out of proportion to their number that many must have been led to believe that they were voicing the feelings of the harvesters in general.

ST THOMAS' CHURCH HOLDS ANNUAL MTC AND CONG. REUNION

The annual meeting and congregation of St. Thomas' Anglican Church was held in the I. O. O. F. hall on Wednesday evening Jan. 9th.

Rev. A. Love outlined the work of the Parish during the past year and reports of the various organizations were accepted, which, on the whole, were very satisfactory. Church assets in property were valued at $4,000 by M. G. Cardell, Vicar's Warden. The W.A. report showed splendid activity for the year and a hearty vote of thanks was passed for their financial assistance to the Vestry. The financial statement submitted by H. C. Smart, People's Warden, revealed a small credit balance in Bank.

In extending thanks to subscribers for enabling him to show the Church free of debt, Mr. Smart stressed the need for wider measure of support so that current expenses and necessary repairs and extensions could be taken care of for the future.

Officers for 1924 were elected as Vicar's Warden, M. G. Cardell; People's Warden, H. C. Smart; Vestry—W. G. Long, D.N. Wade, A. Saffield, A. E. Mills, R. A. Kilpatrick, H. C. Montgomery, G. L. Hudson, H. V. Pawling, A. W. Bishop, F. W. Brown, C. T. Lally and P. C. Comprom.

Delegates to Synod—H. V. Pawling and C. T. Lally, (with W. G. Long and D. N. Wade as substitutes). Routine business was pleasingly relieved by vocal solos rendered by Miss D. Primrose and Mr. D. N. Wade accompanied by Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Smart.

WINTER CARNIVAL AT BANFF SPRINGS WILL BE BIG ATTRACTION

Banff, after the serious business of catering to its thousands of visitors during the summer season, which opens only in May and lasts till the autumn frosts, is now, enjoys a brief respite, takes a deep breath, then plunges into a still more serious business of entertaining those who enjoy winter sports. The winter sports, that start with the first flight of snow and the chilly frosty air that has a healthy tang and a breath of pines, is hailed with delight by young and old. The mountain town is now the recognized hub of winter sport of all kinds and well merits the name of "Canada's Winter Play-ground". For the past eight years Banff's winter season has been celebrated in a spectacular manner by a Carnival extending over a period of ten days—cramped with competitions in speed skating, snow-skiing, tobogganing, trap-shooting, sleigh-dog races, etc. To this extensive programme a 100-mile all-weather "ice derby," the only event of its kind in the history of the world, was added.

The winter Carnival prizes consist of cups, gold and silver medals, and other trophies are awarded in amateur championship events, the ladies' hockey championship and ski-jumping championships, attracting the highest class of performers with international reputations, always proving popular and spectacular features. The 1924 programme of the eight annual event, which opens February 2nd and closes February 9th, is the best on record, augmented by what promises to be the most unique and attractive novelty events in the history of winter sports in any part of the world. It is not a show put on by private enterprise, but a Banff institution where winter sport and rugged surroundings, is enjoyed to the fullest extent both by participants and onlookers. It is a riot of blood stirring events, staged by performers who rank with the world's best. Visitors will flock to Banff from all over the continent and go away talking of the exciting scenes enacted for their benefit. Banff forms a wonderful setting for a winter-carnival. With winter starting in about the first week in December and lasting till early in March in many ways the mountain town, held like a sleeping beauty in the spell of the frost king seems lovelier than summer. Clear sharp, days followed by windless atmosphere snow-clad peaks glittering in the sun sunlight, spruce and pine trees bowed down by snow—such is the background against which the winter carnival with its wild fun and excitement is staged. It attracts long distance visitors who find that in spite of the distance traveled Banff is a real winter resort.

GEOLOGY OF WAINWRIGHT DISTRICT PROVES VASTNESS OF LOCAL CRUDE OIL FIELD

D. O. Credille, who brought in the two producing wells for the British Petroleum company is now in Texas and when he returns here in the spring he will bring with him several new drilling rigs for local companies which are now in course of formation. These rigs will be placed on acreage in the field which was acquired lately.

In an interview given to a body of oil experts in Texas Mr. Credille is very optimistic as to the future of the field, and he looks for large developments here within a short time; in addition to being Alberta's first successful driller he possesses a life time's knowledge of oil structures all over the American continent and he is recognized as a practical authority on all that pertains to the producing of oil—hence his opinions carry weight.

Four Oil Strata

In drilling of the B. P. No. 2, Mr. Credille states that the drill went through five sands, four of which held oil, the fifth being dry, while one of these sands held a high gravity fluid. This is high gravity fluid in the last hole this is high gravity fluid was swamped by the heavier fluid and did not show, but its presence was determined, and its extraction from the ground will be specialized in at the next drilling.

Mr. Credille says that the B. P. oil is similar to that found in the Kern River of California in Southern California, and will produce kerosene and lubricants but is low in gasoline content. It possesses and asphalt base, and, says the driller, this oil field can produce enough of this latter material to cover all the roads in Canada.

200 Barrel Well

As the B. P. well stands at present it will produce 200 barrels of oil per day, and could be made to emit a heavier flow but the intention was, if possible, to bring in an easy flowing well without the attendant troubles of high pressure which would cause a movement of the sand and a consequent cutting of the piping. With one thousand feet of flow line the well will produce 200 barrels per day—more if the line were lowered.

Mr. Credille is of the opinion that the well will show a higher grade of oil as the flow increase while he remains in the field.

MR GEORGE BABB RETIRE AFTER YEARS SCHOOL BO. SERVICE

It was with feelings of regret that the ratapatties who were absent from the annual meeting of the Plaxtonville School District held on January 5th, learned of the resignation of Mr. G. Babb as chairman of the school board.

Mr. Babb has been a very faithful and efficient servant of the district for many years. He occupied this office which was conferred upon him by his fellow ratapatties for so long a period without thought of reward for services rendered other than that of a duty nobly and properly accomplished.

I feel that the least those absent from the meeting can do to show their feelings is to express through the columns of The Star their hearty appreciation for the long and faithful services rendered.

Several Drillers Are Preparing Now For Spring

More Acreage Filed

It is significant that two producing wells should have been brought in at the first attempt in each instance and points to the years of drilling in Texas and other States before any oil was discovered. He estimates that the field is fifty miles long by twenty broad while the cold northern winter will hinder drilling and a heavy gas pressure and possibly a large body of lighter oil would have been tapped.

Similar To Texas

Gushers in the Texas field have always come in when honeycombed sand and oil with asphaltic bases have been struck in proximity; this is precisely the condition that obtains in eastern Alberta, and Mr. Credille states that the principal prospect of the field will be in the north next 150 feet lower than where the drill reached in the B. P. well. One peculiar feature of the geology here is that the general formation is cretaceous as in the Texas field—while the production horizon is almost identical with that of the California territory, and hence production policies will be developed along the line of the Pacific Coast state.

Recognize Oil Cap

What Mr. Credille regards as an outstanding feature is that the first

OIL REFINERY FOR EDMONTON IS NOW ASSURED IN SPRING

J. L. Mercer of Edmonton, Alberta calls attention to an error in a statement taken from the Edmonton Journal which said that Mr. Mercer represents interests in Kevin-Sunburst field which control 15,000 acres of oil lands.

Mr. Mercer says that the original statement was made before the Edmonton council when he said that his contracts for the crude for the proposed refinery in Edmonton were from a company in the Kevin-Sunburst field who own 1500 acres, instead of 15,000 acres. Mr. Mercer adds that the refinery for Edmonton, which will use Kevin-Sunburst crude, is now assured—Montana Oil Journal.

WHO GETS THE DIFFERENCE

Dealing with the question of shipping Alberta grain east or west the Vancouver Sun in an editorial says: "FRDAYS closing market in Alberta, was for No 1 Northern, 81 cents per bushel, Vancouver buyers on Fridays closing market paid for the same wheat $1.00 per bushel."

The freight rate from Edmonton or Calgary to Vancouver is 13 1/2 cents, so that instead of receiving 81 cents for his wheat, the Alberta farmer should have received 86 1/2 cents per bushel. In the case of the Peace River farmer, he received only 66 cents per bushel instead of 86 1/2 cents.

Mayor Blatchford of Edmonton and Mr. F. Walker, a grain grower of the Edmonton district, are now in Vancouver trying to find out how, when and where the Alberta farmer is separated from the difference of 5 1/2 cents.

Referring to the recent increase in Vancouver harbor dues of 17 cent per bushel, Mr. Walker said: "We farmers do not understand fractions so I am not very much concerned with what appears to be reasonable port charges, but what I am concerned with is, who gets the spread between the Alberta price of 84 cents and the Coast price of $1.00 per bushel?"

Is it possible for our Peace River farmers to live and prosper on 67 cent wheat? Is it right that they should receive, thresh and haul to market a bushel of wheat for which they receive only 67 cents while the railways are allowed to charge 29 1/2 cents for hauling that same bushel of wheat from the "Prairie" to Vancouver? Is it right that public bodies in Vancouver should remain idle while these Alberta farmers are being trimmed for 5 1/2 cents per bushel by a bunch of Winnipeg grain thieves?

Vancouver should make it her business to help find out who gets this difference.

showing of gypsum and a peculiar limestone formation and from this experience oil or gas may be looked for under every following limestone cap. Other drillers may know from this, he says, that they are in the vicinity of oil.

In this field the Texas expert states that the rotary rig can be used to the best advantage to about 2300 feet. After that the biter that the bit will be operating in the Devonian formation; it will not require an artificial well built up as with the rotary in the lighter formations and the standard rig, he believes will be most suitable for the lower depths.

Mr. Credille states that if the drilling in the Number Two well had been carried down to between 2085 and 2125 feet, that the same formation met with in the Number One well would have been encountered, and a heavy gas pressure and possibly a large body of lighter oil would have been tapped.

It is a rather remarkable fact in relation to gas wells that as the gasoline saturated gas is drawn off it becomes richer. This has been proved in the Texas field, where abandoned wells have been purchased, suction plants installed and gasoline produced in this way.

Though aware to personal publicity and reticent in the extreme, Mr. Credille is not afraid to go on record as holding the opinion that we possess a very valuable oil field here, and that developments in the near future may demonstrate that oil is to be found in much larger quantities than have yet been produced.

Yesterday's Edmonton Bulletin stated that over five thousand acres of oil leases were filed on in the Edmonton area, the local Dominion land offices on Monday 2nd other signs are not wanting to prove that this particular district may look forward to a brisk development of the underground fluid minerals next spring or even before then.

All the 5,920 acres were filed upon a group of outside cap analysts taking up 4,000 acres in an error in the record by various local men.

All the filing took place in township 47, ranges 7, 8 and 9, this being in the Wainwright territory.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE FROM SERIOUS HURT WHEN BUGGY UPSET

Mr. G. Leroux, who is only recovering from a recent fall which broke both his wrists, was returning with her husband and Mrs. O. Croteau from a country last week and Mr. Croteau was driving one of his spirited teams when the axle of the buggy came out of the neckyoke and dropped to the ground.

This action frightened the team, which started to run, and the riders in a serious predicament. As most people know, in a case such as this, the more the driver pulls on the lines in an endeavor to stop the horses the more the wheels run up on the team, and Mr. Croteau recognizing this decided quickly that the only thing left to do was to turn the buggy over before the pace got too great. He therefore turned the team off sharply with the result that the buggy was turned over and the occupants all thrown to the road; from which proceeding, however nothing more serious than bruises was sustained. Even Mrs. Leroux with her injured arms escaped miraculously.

Mr. S. Woods for number of years section foreman at Greenhills has been promoted and has moved his family to Rivers, his new location.

CONGREGATION OF ST ANDREW'S CH. IN ANNUAL SESSION

At a fairly well-attended gathering in St Andrew's church on Monday evening the annual congregational meeting took place when he reports from the officers of the various organizations connected with that denomination were given.

These showed that although the financial stringency had been felt there as in other institutions things were looking brighter around, and hopes for further future progress were expressed.

With regard to the finances of the church these showed that after the handling of over $1200.00 there was a small balance on the right side for the start of the new church year.

Interest was confined in the work of the church by nearly everyone taking part in the various discussions, and the re- was a general feeling among those present that a call should be extended to the minister to permanently fill the pulpit which he only now occupies on a temporary engagement.

The new board of managers as elected at the meeting will consist of Messrs J. Dawson, J. Sutherland and Mrs. Lepper; Messrs F. Spencer, H. Kemp, and Mrs. Sutherland; and Messrs C. L. Elder and Mrs. Dunsmore; the first three being elected for three years, the last three for two years, and the last three named for one year from this meeting.

Mr. W. Huntford chairman of the retiring board, was made chairman of the meeting, while Mr. R. H. Watson handled the secretarial duties of the meeting very efficiently.

The ladies of the church served light refreshments at the close before dispersal.

RADIO SERVICE NOW MADE AVAILABLE TO PATRONS OF C. N. R.

According to an announcement made by M. W. D. Robb, vice president of the Canadian National railways, radio will prove an important part in the service of the National system during the coming year. By making use of existing broadcasting stations and by the creation of others programs of entertainment and news will be broadcasted from one end of the Dominion to the other.

Another important item will be the equipping of all transcontinental trains of the Canadian National railways with radio receiving sets and placing them in charge of skilled operators, so that news items and concerts may be broadcasted to trains en route across Canada. Very successful experiments along this line were carried out during the past summer by the National system when all special trains were equipped with radio receiving sets and concerts and news picked up by them while the train was travelling. A radio receiving set installed in the car used by Mr. Lloyd George was the means of bringing to him word-wide news of the greatest importance and of causing him to characterize as "inevitable" this special feature of the Canadian National service.

BUFFALO ON MENU

Buffalo tongues and tails, one-time favored delicacy of the plainsman, and prepared by experienced chefs, will grace the menus of Canadian National Transcontinental dining cars on and after January 15, it is announced here. The entire output of tongues and tails from the world famous herd at Wainwright Buffalo park have been secured for exclusive use on C. N. R. dining cars, whose chefs will also serve buffalo steaks and roast buffalo ribs. Canadian National system hotels are also serving buffalo steaks and roasts, and these delicacies are finding great favor with visitors particularly those from the United States.

Dandy's Gold Star And Its Meaning

"But we've already invited everybody. Nora scowled at her mother-in-law, and Michael drew down a corner of his mouth in disgust at such a colloquy.

Martha knew it was hopeless to argue with them. They were young and in love, or thought they were. She gathered her sewing things from the table by the window, "I have a lot of work to do for Mrs. Graham," she apologized as she started for the kitchen, her brimming eyes averted.

"But we haven't had any supper," protested Nora.

"Supper?" The poor soul seemed dazed. "Supper? Oh, I clear forgot about it. But I've got so much to do, Nora. Could you and Michael go to the restaurant in the village this evening? I'll be lending you the money, dear." She slipped her hand down in her rusty-black waist and drew forth
a shabby little pocketbook.

"Here's three dollars. Will that be enough?" Nora took it.

"And I have three dollars myself," laughed Michael Halloran. "Come on, Nora. Clap on your hat, I'm starved."

Michael's job on the railroad did not materialize. It was just as well, he explained, for the men were talking of going on strike before long.

In the meanwhile he would make very good wages working for a friend in the village who kept a pool room and
"speak easy."

Martha's egg and milk money paid for the wedding dance. The cottage rang with the shrieks of the company.
Finnegan's jazz band consisted of a cornet, two banjos, a fiddle and drums, and cymbals, played more wildly as the night advanced. The windows were thrown open and the riot of sound spread far through the sweet spring evening. At midnight a neighbor came to inform them that Farmer Conly had been brought home from the hospital so that he might die in his own bed. The company paused to eat and drink and then put death

aside again for the dance.

In the kitchen Padraic stood beside his mistress as she covered in the corner. A ridge of hair stood up straight from his spine and his muscles were taut. Occasionally his long white fangs would gleam in the dull light of the oil lamp on the table. Again the neighbor came. He was sent away with a volley of curses. Martha protested and the guests began to leave.

When the last reveler had departed
Nora entered the kitchen, her cheeks flushed, her black hair streaked about her face, wet with perspiration. "You-re a fine one," she panted, "driving off
my friends."

She panted to control the swelling flood of veneration. Martha could hear Michael in the front room muttering to himself. When she had finished her abuse Nora lifted a plate and hurled it against the wall. Padraic uttered a snarling protest and crouched for a spring. With a shriek he darted back through the door and closed it.

"That dog'll kill me! He'll kill me!"
she cried. "He started to jump on me!"

"I'll fix him!" Martha heard, the throat from Michael, heard him staggering about the front room in search of a weapon, and then Nora tearing at a little desk in which they kept a pistol.

Martha locked the door and barred it with the table. "God in heaven, they don't know what they're doing!" she whispered to herself.

"Let out that dog," ordered Michael.
She did not answer. "Let that dog
out or I'll fire through the door!"
Murder was in the air. Padraic's great ivorys were all bared, his yellow eyes stared on the door.

"Michael!" called Martha. "Don't shoot. Please don't shoot. It's the drink's got you. Don't, Michael."

"Let that dog out, I tell ya!"
"Michael, it's Good Friday. It's Good Friday, Michael, with the Saviour
good and bad. Don't—"

Padraic's hand went to her temple,
and she felt a crisp place in her white hair where the bullet had struck.
Her thought was that Danny's letter would come to late. Then her stout heart held her for another and final struggle. She found a heavy piece of timber, made it fast to the dog's collar and slipped with him out of the back door, through the little piece of land she had spaded up for her kitchen garden, and to the cowshed.

There was the carcass of coming morning in the air. The sky was a field of dusted silver and widely cast gens of gold. Toward the east, the morning star shone with steady light as big, it seemed to her, as the gilt star on the Honor Roll. She stood in the cottage, died down and blessed silence came again to the house and had her Danny's sober indignity and given her. Padraic rubbed against her skirt and the cow in the stall loved to her.

Until the dawn began to creep into the heavens she stood and prayed her simple but sublime faith never wavering, confident that at last her voice would reach God, that it would find a little rift through angelic choir and through the never-ending diapason that began swelling from earth to heaven when the heart of a mother was first wrung with sorrow or elated with the joy of her mission; confident that He would hear her call as the prophets of old had promised He would, and that He would give her
His compassion.

The great sin was lost in the days birth. She turned into the cowshed and, with Padraic beside her, lay down
in some clean straw and slept.

The birds in the eaves of the cow-shed had almost ended their mating heralding, the eve of Easter when Martha awakened; the sun was well up over the distant, low-lying hills; the crystal morning air was filled with music. She shook wisps of straw from her white hair and rubbed her face, finding it wet. She had cried in her sleep.

The horror of the night before returned to her, but Biddy was restless.
A clean mat was read where she had left it the night before and she milked
the cow, taking a good drink of the warm, life-giving fluid and giving a drink to Padraic. Then she took Biddy to pasture and fed and watered the chickens.

Her waist and skirt were creased
and rumpled, but she feared to enter the cottage and made the best toilet she could in her refuge, reminding herself that it was in a stable that He who had risen from the tomb was born.

From the sun she guessed it to be nearing nine o'clock. The mail train must have come and gone. It was the first time she had failed to hear its warning whistle and distance-mellowed clangor since Danny went away.
Perhaps the end of her agony had come, the last bitter trial of her soul

been suffered.

Easter miracle was transpiring. All about her she could feel life stirring.
Life after the dead winter, tree trunk and bough trembled with it; leaves were sorting and singing their love test songs of the year. Perhaps waiting for her at the post office, there would be the letter telling her that her Danny, too, had risen from the dead. Lavinia Allen would give it to her, and she hurry away to a quiet corner and spell out each word once and over again, or perhaps she had better take it to Mr. Graham, the lawyer and let him read it first to himself and then to her so that her heart might not stop beating from sheer happiness.

Never once did she think of the more than a thousand disappointments of the past. With Padraic at her heels
she made a wide detour of the house, hurried through the lane and struck the main road to the village. In the warm sunshine her heart became light and her steps quickened. At times she would run a few steps, Padraic leaping in the air ahead of her and barking furiously. Faint roses came to her wrinkled cheeks, and she forgot entirely that she was out without a bonnet and that the villagers might wonder at her untidiness at such a season of happiness and fine raiment.

Martha gave a quick glance at the Honor Roll. The sun made Danny's star seem almost as brilliant as the one she has prayed to before dawn.
Across the tracks she saw Mr. Graham get out of his buggy and enter the post office. She hurried on. Padraic, ahead of her, suddenly stopped, and threw up his long muzzle, sniffing the air. "If Danny's letter has come this time," she told herself, "Padraic has got his scent from it."

Graham met her as he was leaving the post office, his hands full of letters and papers. The dog leaped upon him barking furiously and almost throwing him of his feet.

"Mr. Conly died during the night," he told her, "and all the time he was stricken no one thought of getting his mail for him. Make Padraic get down his feet."

"As she seized the brute by the collar,
he noticed the absence of her bonnet and a bit of straw clinging to her hair."

"What's the matter, Mother Conroy
he asked.

Holding fast to the dog she looked up at the lawyer and, finding herself unable to frame an excuse for her appearance, answered him only with the distress that showed in her eyes.

"They turned you out, did they?"
he demanded. His good-natured face flamed with anger. "I know they did, and this thing has got to stop, I tell you. I'll have the law turn them out if I can. Come upstairs with me."

"But my—my letter," she stammered. Graham turned and called in to Miss Allen; "Anything for Mother Conroy today?"

"Nothing, Mr. Graham," called back
Miss Allen.

"Poor Miss Lavinia!" he muttered
as they made their way up the stairs
of the building adjoining. "She's too nervous for that job. I get half of Gorman's mail, and he gets half of Graham's."

"Mr. Graham!" Martha's voice sounded weakly. They were entering the lawyers' office. The pallor of her face frightened him.

"Take this chair, you're not well," he said, making her sit beside the desk on which he dropped his mail.

"I was thinking," she began with trembling lips and eyes rapidly filling with tears, "that she might have lost my letter." Her voice broke into a sob. "But God wouldn't be that unkind to a poor old mother."

All her courage and optimism were gone and the bitter tears of a bewildered old woman flowed freely. Graham sat waiting for her to quiet down running lightly through the mail of

BULLETIN FROM PROVINCIAL GOVT.

Issued by Publicity Commissioner, Government Buildings, Edmonton

Opening of Legislature

The date for the opening of the 1924 Session of the Legislature has been fixed for Monday, January 28. Several bills have already been sent to the printer to be ready for the Session. The new liquor act and a new election bill will be among the important measures for the Session.

SEED FAIR

The Annual Provincial Seed Fair, bigger and better than ever this year, will be held in Edmonton, at 10405 Jasper Avenue, on Thursday and Friday, January 17 and 18th. The Annual Convention of the Alberta Seed Growers' Association will be held at the same time, at which several outstanding speakers will speak on important topics. The government exhibit which was placed at Chicago will be on exhibit at the seed fair.

Dairy Convention

Preparations are now under way for the Annual Provincial Dairy Convention to be held in Edmonton at the Macdonald Hotel January 23, 24 and 25. In view of the great success of the new cream grading system and the effect this system has had in placing Alberta butter on the world's markets, the subject of grading is to play a big part in the program of the Convention and will be discussed in all its phases. Special emphasis is also to be laid on problems of the producers. Prominent speakers will be present, including one or two noted dairy experts from outside the province. A banquet will be held the second evening of the Convention.

Coal Shipment to Ontario

Alberta has shipped approximately 51,000 tons of coal to Ontario markets during the past year, according to figures supplied by H. Stutchbury, Alberta Trade Commissioner. The campaign conducted by the government to make Alberta coal popular in Ontario has met with immense success. The matter of securing a permanent low freight rate on the Alberta coal to the Eastern market is still under negotiation between Premier Greenfield and the officials of the C. N. R.

New Appointments

The appointment of R. A. Smith, who has been Acting Deputy Attorney General since the resignation of A. G. Browning, has been made permanent, as has also the appointment of Tremholme Dickson to the position of Official Guardian. The appointment of J. J. Frawley of Calgary to the position of Solicitor with the Attorney General's Department is announced, to fill the vacancy created by the advancement of Mr. Smith to the Deputy's office.

Alberta May Develop Hydro Power
Premier Greenfield, during his visit to Ottawa in connection with the natural resources question, obtained promise from the Dominion authorities that no decision would be made regarding the rights for development of the Spray Lakes power scheme in Alberta, until the Provincial Government has full opportunity to investigate the feasibility of developing a Provincial hydro-electric proposition. Word to this effect was received this week by Acting Premier Hoadley. The Provincial Government has already made arrangements for an investigation of the whole proposition by an eastern expert. This expert has asked for certain information as to areas likely to be served by such a scheme, probable power consumption, etc. This information has been gathered. The Provincial Government has application now on file at Ottawa and the expert advice form the basis of any future action the Government may take.

Increase in Revenues

Considerable increase in revenues from various sources is recorded by the Provincial Secretary's Department in 1923 over 1922. Deputy Provincial Secretary, E. Trowbridge, announces the following figures:

	1922	1923
Motor cars	$39,964	$41,933
Motor car license	716,873	744,000
Gasoline tax	185,000	240,000
Amusement tax	183,933	204,000
Corporations Tax	462,000	475,000

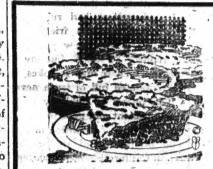

These figures show a considerable advance over the revenues estimated at the beginning of the year. The number of motor licenses issued during 1923 was 41,923 compared with 39,964 issued in 1922.

Total taxes collected by the Government during the past year were $3,980,905, which is an increase of $1,329,459 over the previous year, and an increase of $901,735 over the amount collected in 1920 which was the best previous year experienced in the province.

Alberta Coal for Pacific Steamers

Announcement has been made that the Board of Harbour Commissioners at Vancouver will erect coal bunkers costing half a million to provide for handling of Alberta and Eastern B. C. coal. This announcement crowns with success the efforts which have been under way for their past two years by Premier Greenfield, who realized the possibility of a new outlet for Alberta steam coal in its use on Pacific Steamers, and who has had H. Stutchbury, Trade Commissioner, employed on the matter. The Alberta Government official, together with several coal companies, have conducted tests to establish the feasibility of Alberta steam coal for use in Marine boilers, and these tests have been satisfactory.

NO PESSIMISM HERE

Canadians have one and three-quarter billions of dollars invested in Dominion of Canada bonds. In 1913 Canadians only held 12 per cent. of Canadian government bonds. Now they own 68.7 per cent. of them.

During the past three years the individual Canadian has increased his per capita investment in Canadian government bonds no less than 15 per cent. Canadians have one a quarter billion in the savings bank and half a billion in demand deposits in the banks.

The individual Canadian has savings in the banks equal to $800 per family. Experts declare that the wealth of Canada is $2,000 per head, not counting undeveloped water-power, farm land and mineral fields.

Canadian savings banks deposits are $33,000,000 greater now than a year ago.

RECORD OAT YIELD

A yield of 140 bushels per acre of oats is reported from Lloydminster, Alberta. The crop was grown by R. S. Symonds, a farmer of that district, who threshed 1,050 bushels from 7 1/2 acres. His other oats ran 120 bushels per acre.

NEW LAKE RECORD

Creating a new lake navigation record, the S. S. C. O. Jenkins cleared Fort William on Dec. 24th and arrived at Midland Dec. 28. This voyage marked the close of lake navigation for the season, and broke the record set two years ago by the C. O. Jenkins when she cleared Fort William on Dec. 21st with a cargo of grain.

Magnificent Specimen of Moose Head

HIS record moose head from an animal shot in Northern Ontario has been secured by the Canadian National Railways to be placed in their building at the British Empire Exhibition in London. The head has been specially mounted for display and is one of the finest specimens ever secured. As far as is known only two larger moose heads have ever been secured, and one of these was presented to the late King Edward VII. by Canadian sportsmen.

The particulars of the head shown in the photograph are interesting. The spread of the antlers is 70 1/2 inches from tip to tip. The weight of the antlers, before mounting, was 64 pounds. The length of the right antler from the base of horn to the tip is 37 1/2 inches and that of the left antler 39 inches. The width of the left palm at the widest point is 15 inches and that of the right 14 1/2 inches. The points total 28 in.

number, there being 14 on each antler. The weight of the animal was 1,400 pounds.

Before being shipped to England the head will be displayed in the windows of ticket offices of the Canadian National Railways in various cities. It is now on exhibition at the ticket office at the northwest corner of King and Yonge Sts., Toronto, where it is attracting much attention and comment.

They're Doing It in New York Where Joseph Plunkett Has World's Most Unique Summer Resort

New York City—An original plan to give a touch of the cool country to those who must stay in the city over hot week-ends is being big results and making a rich man of its originator, Joseph Plunkett, director of the Strand Theatre here.

Plunkett has turned his face into what is, in effect, a country meadow. Artificial bushes cool the dim recesses of the big auditorium. The small trees which stand in the lobby fill the air, while overhead ice water runs through hidden pipes with a tinkling sound that suggests an April shower.

From the orchestra pit comes the realistic singing of birds and the humming of bees. The curtain rises on the kind of woody scene that the audience has been dreaming about all the hot, humid day.

Boys and girls in cool whites and greens form part of the picture, which is, however, merely a background for the most cooling feature of all, the lulling, airy melody of the summer's favorite fox trot songs, "Swing Down the Lane" and "Saw Mill River Road."

And while the summer boys and girls sing, the tired audience visions shady lanes and eventide on river roads.

Mr. Plunkett says that during the summer more than half a million persons will get their country week-ends at the Strand Theatre, without the dust, grime and crowds of city trips.

Danny's Gold Star

his late client, Farmer Connelly, and pushing the frantic Padraic's paw from his desk. He laid aside a letter for Connelly, put in the Conly box by mistake, and then paused to study the address on the next. His hand trembled, and he turned and looked upon the bowed white head beside him for a moment. Then he took Padraic by the collar and threw him out into the hall and closed and locked the door.

"Martha," he said softly, "look up. Here is your letter. Shall I read it?" She did not seem to understand.

"I found it in Mr. Connelly's mail. Shall I read it for you?"

She did not answer, and so he took her hands from her face and put the letter in them.

"See, it is from Ireland," he said. "Is it Danny's handwriting?" She nodded. "Shall I read it for you?" She nodded again.

As he took the letter and opened it she clasped her knotted fingers in window shade upon her face. It was as placid as a pool in a glen and irradiated the holy beauty one may see on the countenance of a child at the altar rail, Graham read:

"Dear mother: I was lost for a long time, but am all right. I must have come by myself to North Aram Island, for I found myself there among the help burners and fishermen. They didn't know anything about our being torpedoes, and it took me a long time to remember it after I got over the sickness. My name was lost. I wasn't until I got to the mainland in County Donegal and began hunting for work that the old names you used to mention so often began to set on the right track."

"There was plenty of work in the linen mills because of the war, and the family I lived with never stopped asking me about America, for they could tell from the way I talked where I had come from."

As Graham turned the closely written page Martha found her voice. "The blessed folk! The blessed folk!" she murmured.

"They said I looked like the O'Donnells of Ballyshannon, and that Simon O'Donnell, who made a lot of money with his knitting mill doing summer work, came in to see me. It was from him that I got my Irish name and address."

"My brother, Simon," she had whispered, for she seemed in a dream. "He says for you to take the next boat, for he is getting old and hasn't a soul to leave his pot of gold to him. He is starting back right away on sending a cable but he said, 'No, he cause he would need me to help him run the mill and need you to help him. Besides, if you had given me up for dead, the cable would be too sudden.'"

Graham paused and glanced at Martha's face. It was as if cut in ivory. The sunshine in her hair made it a halo of silver. Her eyes held a rapid expression, as if they were beholding things not of mortal ken.

"I'll send your brother a cable this morning," he said softly. He repeated it, but she gave no sign of having heard him. Then he resumed reading:

"I know it was your prayers that saved me. I could hear them even during the long sickness on North Aram, and could hear them through the noise of the mill as I worked. I dreamed that you were calling me and that Nora was heating you with a stick. If she has been cruel to you let her have the place, tell her nothing and take the next ship. If Padraic is living bring him with you. With a heart full of love, dear mother, and thanks to God for His mercy."

Your loving son,
DANNY.

Graham detached a check for a hundred pounds, pinned to the last sheet of the letter, and placed it in her lap. "God has made you a fine Easter gift Mother Connelly," he said.

Her hands lifted and reached out to one of his. She pressed it against her cheek and her tears fell upon it. "I knew he'd hear me," she sobbed. "He's the only friend the old mothers have. It's His own gold stars in heaven that will guide them to their brave tasks."

We are so used to disguising ourselves from others that we end by disguising ourselves from ourselves.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

JUST ONCE

"How often do you call a man on this 'here' line?" asked the passenger of a porter.

"Just once," he replied.

HOW HE MISSED IT

The steamer was only a few feet from the quay, says a Yorkshire paper, when there was a sudden commotion and a man came running madly from the dock gates, shouting to the officials to wait a moment. Without pausing in his stride, he flung his bag on the dock, took a desperate leap and landed on the deck with a crash. "Good!" he shouted, as he was assisted to his feet. "That did it." A few seconds later and I should have missed it."

"Missed it?" exclaimed one of the passengers. "This boat is just coming in."

"The parson was talking to the baby at the house."

"Why is it that the grass and trees here keep on being so usual to-day?" asked the good man.

"Because mother washed the windows this morning, when she heard you were coming up," was the child's reply.

VERY PARTICULAR

There are still benevolent folk about who carry conviction into the slightest detail.

A London bookkeeper had a letter from one of his sons recently, ordering a copy of "Wansley's poems with the postscript: 'Please do not send me one bound in calf, as I am a vegetarian.'"

He: "I got a note from Stings today saying that he absolutely must have the money I owe him to-morrow."

She: "Oh, the poor fellow."

FROM EXPERIENCE

The teacher was trying to impress upon her pupils the importance of doing their bit at all times, and to bring the answer "Did you?" she inquired: "What is it we find so easy to get behind so hard to get out of?"

"There was silence for a minute, and then one little girl answered, "Bo!"

A DONATION

Mrs. Murphy was getting the supper for the children on Saturday night when a young woman came to her.

"I'm a collector for the Drunkard's Friend," she said. "Could you help me?"

"Come around to-night and I'll give you Murphy," said the housewife as she went about her work.

PROFITABLE SEARCH

Herbert, on telephone: "Hallo, Wilfred! I sent that crate of chicken you ordered; but next time I wish you could fasten cloth up more securely. Coming from the station the wretches of things get on me. I spent hours unfastening them, and then only found half of them." Wilfred: "So-so, I only sent six!"

RELUCTANT

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

"From station to twenty they knew more than I did," said an old farmer, talking about his horse. "At twenty-five they know as much, at thirty they were willing to hear what I had to say, at thirty-five they asked my advice, and I think, when they get to forty they will actually consider that the old man does know something."

THE HIBERNIAN'S JOKE

In a crowded street car on a wet night a young man was standing up, holding to a strap, when a sudden jerk threw into the lap of a young woman.

He rose instantly and apologized profusely. But when the car started again the same thing happened. The young lady got angry and inquired somewhat snappishly, "What kind of a man do you call yourself?"

"Oh to-night," he said, "I thought I was an Irishman, but now I'm inclined to think I am bit of a Lapslander."

Sellers will meet competitive prices on all of their lines, including flour, groceries, fruit or toys. Why send your money out of the district.

No man ever lives to be as old as he feels at twenty-one.

TENSE

"The teacher was endeavoring to make clear to the youngsters the grammatical tense," "My father had money," she pointed out. "In the past tense." Now Emily, what tense would you be employing if you should say, 'My father has money'?"

"That would be the present," said Emily, very seriously.

"Is my ready-made a handkerchief?" "What is it which is unpleasant, but which nobody wants to lose?" A law suit.

FAT MAN

On the way home to-night, Fatty stopped in front of a haberdashery's display window. "I asked him if he was thinking of buying a shirt or pajamas or something and he sighed when he said: 'The only thing that I want is a pair of pants.'"

Deeché: "You are very kind to lend me this pound. I feel as if I can never repay you!"

Ashe: "Oh, why on earth didn't you say that at first?"

HE HAD A BANANA

It was the object of the lesson, when the scholars were supposed to bring some article—a hammer, a top, a box, or what not—with them to school to serve as a model.

One boy presented himself at the teacher's desk with the fearful announcement: "Please, sir, I've swallowed my object."

"Swallowed it?" cried the teacher, in alarm. "Whatever was it?"

"Please, sir, with a gulp, it was a banana."

PROMPT ACTION

"Now," said the lecturer, "suppose you have been called to a patient with hysterics—some one, for instance, who begins to laugh and found it impossible to stop—what is the first thing you ought to do?"

"Amputate the funny bone," replied the new student."

Widowed mother: "When you are my age it will be time enough to dream of an husband."

Daughter: "Yes, mamma, for the second time."

PAYING OFF THE MORTGAGE

Every intelligent thinking man will agree that the mortgaging of a farm is a serious business. It is serious because of the fact that, from the moment the mortgage goes into effect, the interest begins to accumulate. Night and day the interest works against the mortgagor; rain or shine, hail or snow, good season or bad, interest keeps on piling up.

A mortgage does not recognize drought, hail, rust or insect ravages. Its one and only consideration is that the interest shall be met when due. Where the money comes from is no concern at all.

Sooner or later the interest on the mortgage has to be met; and if the crop should, unfortunately, have been rusted or hailed, what is the farmer going to do about it? Ask the mortgage company to carry him another year? Quite so, but this is not a remedy. It is only postponing the date of payment. Next year the interest will have more than doubled. The day reckoning has only been postponed. The price of farm produce may not be satisfactory but this does not help matters. The interest on the mortgage goes on accumulating. What is to be done in the meantime?

A notable feature in the experience of mortgage companies doing business in Western Canada is that the farmer who has live stock to sell every year is the one who keeps his mortgage in good standing. Hail does not destroy pigs or cattle; in dry seasons there is usually sufficient crop for feed, and the farmer with a few good milk cows, steers for winter fattening, a bunch of fattening pigs, or a flock of good ewes, a nice flock of poultry, and a good garden can usually carry out his first duty which is to support his wife and family. He may also keep the mortgage and taxes in good standing too.

Many cases could be cited in support of the statement that farmers who raise live stock pay the interest on their mortgages, and are able to meet the principal at maturity. The writer meets men of that sort every week, many farming on poor land—land that would not be looked at twice by many farmers. He has found upon investigation that, in spite of poor soil, the mortgage is not in arrears; that in some cases the principal of the mortgage has been paid off in others it has been reduced, and that more often than not the margin of safety is sufficient to be pleasing alike to farmer and mortgage company.

Occasionally too, we come across farmers in poor districts owing a section or more of land, with clear title, who hold first mortgages on some of the surrounding lands. The only way they can account for being in this position is that they always have something to sell in poor times as in good. What they have to sell usually is cattle or hogs.
